

Tree-structured model for rank data

Yu-Shan Shih (史玉山)

Department of Mathematics, National Chung Cheng University

Abstract

A decision tree method for analyzing complete or partial rank data is introduced. It utilizes Pearson's chi-squared tests to select binary splits and determine the size of the resulting tree. We find that this method is relatively unbiased and is powerful in selecting the informative split variables. A real data study further demonstrates the effectiveness of our method.