

One learning experience-about scientific writing

I-Ping Tu (杜憶萍)

Institute of statistical science, Academia Sinica

Abstract

I knew that good writing is helpful, but I was not aware that it is that important to my career, when I was in the graduate school. Thus, I missed a golden period for writing learning at Stanford. For the past decade, the good responses I experienced were mostly from the audience in my oral presentations and the negative responses were majorly from journal reviewers. This motivated me to restart my writing learning and I experienced that good writing can be learned. In this talk, I would like to share my learning experience about scientific writing.